DR. CRIPPEN AND HIS COMPAN-ION ARRAIGNED IN COURT.

BOTH PRISONERS COLLAPSE

Had to Be Carried Almost When the Vessel They Sought to Escape
on Reached Quebec.

Quebec, Aug. 1.—Canadian justice moved swiftly today in the case of Dr. Crippen and Miss Lenoire, arrested after an over-ocean chase on suspicion of their connection with the supposed murder of Crippen's wife in London.

The prisoners were placed in jail about two this morning, and it was decided to arraign them at 10:30.

When the steamer Montrose reached its dock an enormous crowd was present, and the police were obliged to fight their way to the carriage in which the prisoners were conveyed to jail.

At the sight of the throng Dr. Crippen almost collapsed and detectives found it necessary to support both the prisoners to prevent their falling.

Dr. Crippen was arraigned and held for a further hearing on August 8. Miss Lenoire was too ill to appear in court.

It is believed the delay was due to advice received today by Inspector Dow from Scotland Yard. The Inspector is awaiting the arrival from London of an officer bearing the necessary extradition papers.

An immense crowd surrounded the building in which the hearing took

INGRAM OUT FOR THE SPEAKERSHIP

State Senator From Pepin Co. Says
He Will Be Candidate If Re-Elected.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Madison, Wis., Aug. 1.—C. A. Ingram of Durand, Pepin county, Wis., stated here today that he will be a candidate for speaker of the Wisconsin assembly in the event of his re-election. He has represented his district—Buffalo and Pepin counties—in the last two legislatures, where he was the leader of the La Follette forces in the house. It is generally understood he will be the candidate of the La Follette organization for the speakership.

Two years ago Assemblyman Ingram was a candidate for the speakership along with several other aspirants. These were George E. Scott, Franklin Farn, Michael J. Cleary, Hanchardville, L. W. Ledvina, Two Rivers; Wallace Ingalls, Racine, and Levi H. Bancroft, Richland Center.
Judge Bancroft, a conservative, won out.

All these leaders are eliminated from a contest for the speakership at the next session. Scott is a candidate for state senator; Ledvina is after the speakership in his district;
Ingalls is running for congress;
Cleary is out for insurance commissioner, and Bancroft is in the race for attorney general.

Assemblyman Ingram was made chairman of the important committee on judiciary upon his first election to the legislature in 1906—an appointment hitherto unknown in the case of a new member.

He is being opposed in his district
by Knut Johnson of Nelson, Buffalo county.

Mr. Ingram said today he is opposed to the injection of the county option issue into the legislature. Such a subject, he said, should be submitted to a vote of the people.

OKLAHOMA HAS A HOT CONTEST

AT THE PRIMARIES ON ITS HANDS
TODAY.

MISSOURI VOTES TUESDAY

Proposed Amendment Disfranchis-ing Illegitimate Negroes Is Supported by Democrats.

Oklaoma City, Okla., Aug. 1.—Primary elections will be held throughout Oklahoma tomorrow by all political parties for the nomination of candidates for all state offices from the governorship down and a delegation of five representatives in Congress.
There are four full party tickets in the field, democratic, republican, socialist and prohibitionist. The democratic and republican each have about 75 candidates on the ballot and a lively contest for most of the offices, while the socialist and prohibitionist have already selected their state tickets and go into the primary as a matter of form, in order to comply with the requirements of the law.

Aside from the prohibition question, the feature of the campaign that is attracting most attention is the submission of the so-called grandfather clause, recently initiated by a vote of the people, and which will be added as an amendment to the state constitution provided a favorable vote is cast at the primary. The proposed amendment provides that persons or their lineal descendants who are entitled to vote under some form of government in 1866 shall not be denied the right of suffrage because of inability to write some section of the constitution, but persons not possessing this qualification must meet this educational requirement before being allowed to vote. The amendment is intended to disfranchise all illiterate negroes in the state. It is supported by the democratic and opposed by the other parties. The negroes have organized to defeat the amendment and serious trouble is expected at the primaries tomorrow in some localities where the negro vote is large.

The democratic contestants for the gubernatorial nomination are four in number. They are Lee Cruise of Ardmore, William H. Murray of Tish-omingo, L. P. Ross of Lawton and Brant Kirk of Oklahoma City. There are seven democratic aspirants for lieutenant governor and several for each of the other places on the ticket.
The republican believe that conditions are bright for their success and as a consequence there are contests for all the places on the ticket. The republican candidates for the governorship are J. W. McNeal of Guthrie, John Fields of Oklahoma City, Thompson L. Ferguson of Watonga and C.
O. Jones of Oklahoma City. The great rivalry among the republicans is for the office of insurance commissioner, for which there are seven candidates to go before the primary.

All of the present representatives in congress are candidates for re-nomination. The three republican representatives have opposition within the ranks of their own party. The two democratic representatives will be renominated without opposition.

Contents in Missouri.
St. Louis, Mo., Aug. 1.—On the eve of the Missouri general primary at the end of an interesting and spirited campaign, each of the factions and candidates expresses confidence and an unusually heavy vote is anticipated throughout the state tomorrow.

Nominees are to be selected by all parties for minor offices, members of both branches of the legislature, representatives in congress and county and local officers.

The state officers to be nominated are:
One judge of the supreme court,
state superintendent of public schools,
and railroad and warehouse commissioner. The republicans have but one candidate for each of the democratic side the principal contest is for the nomination of railroad and warehouse
commissioner, for which there are five names on the ballot.

An entire congressional delegation of sixteen members is to be chosen.
All of the incumbents are candidates.
For re-nomination, with the exception of Representative Harry M. Coudrey of the Twelfth district, the democratic leader in the house, will be renominated without opposition, as will Richard Bartholdt, republican, in the Tenth district. The other members who are without opposition in their own party are Congressman Lloyd of the First district, Buckner of the Second, Alexander of the Third, Dickinson of the Sixth, Shackelford of the Eighth, Elving of the Thirteenth, and Smith of the Sixteenth. The democrats have candidates in all of the congressional districts and the republicans in all of the districts excepting the Fourth.

OVERTIME GAME TO JANESVILLE

LOCALS DEFEAT CHICAGO "WARRENS" 1 TO 0 IN 10 INNINGS. PORTER IN STELLAR ROLE

Second Baseman's Lusty Swat in Final Round Brings in Deciding Run—Game A Pitchers' Duel. With two down in the tenth and the crowd pulling for a hit to bring in Mereness who was stranded on third, Porter landed squarely on one of Pauley's curves for a screaming drive through second, sending the tall left fielder from Delavan home with the only and deciding run of the game which Janesville won from the Warrens of Chicago 1 to 0 yesterday at Yost Park.

Up to the time that Porter essayed the role of rescuer, the contest had been a pitchers' duel between Ralldel and Pauley with the tall finger from Rome possessing the edge. Despite six errors behind him, he held the Warrens' runless attack out nine of the Windy City's clatters and neglected to leave a single base on ball. Pauley was touched up for ten hits and issued one base on balls but was accorded fairly good support. Janesville had one other chance to win in the fifth but after being touched for two hits, Pauley tightened up and retired the entire side on strikes. In the first part of the fifth, the Warrens lost their only chance to win when Olson failed to connect safely with two out and the socks full.

Despite the fact that there were numerous errors and the Chicago aggression slowed the game up considerably by loafing at every opportunity, a fair sized crowd of fans seemed to be well pleased. There were no sensational rallies or slugging bouts but several situations arose that gave the bugs as well as the players food for thought. One of these came about in Janesville's half of the eighth. Carlo hit through short and Olson reached first on a hit. Carlo was forced out at third when Porter poked a slow roller to Olson. Then Motaw dropped Porter's third strike. With men on first and second, Porter was out but instead of going to the bench, he started for first and Motaw doubled Olson and Porter at second and third. There again, instead of taking both men out, the ball was simply relayed to the bases, which would have left both safe if the mixup had been unraveled in time.

Janesville and Porter in particular, rose to the occasion in the tenth. Mereness reached first on a short pop fly to right field. Carlo sacrificed him to second and he reached third unaided when Olson fanned. Then Porter came to the fore with a healthy wallop and Mereness gained home. Games by Innings. FIRST. WARRENS: Sullivan went to first on Miller's error. Olson hit into a double play. Hall to Loomis. Pauley out. Porter to Loomis. No runs. JANESVILLE: Mereness flew out to Sullivan. Carlo reached first on Erickson's fumble of a hot drive. Olson fanned and Porter drove into Erickson's hands. No runs. SECOND. WARRENS: Gregg slammed a clean hit between first and second. Reece forced Gregg at second and reached second on Hall's bad throw to first which spoiled an easy double. Harkness fanned and Erickson flew out to Carlo leaving Reece on third. No runs. JANESVILLE: Hall out, Olson to Reece. Miller out, Pauley to Reece. Hall walked but was caught trying to steal second. No runs. THIRD. WARRENS: Motaw struck out. Pauley hit to right field. Sullivan lifted a high one to Carlo. Olson fanned. No runs. JANESVILLE: Loomis flied to Gregg. Ralldel poked a hot drive over second. Mereness drove in Sullivan's hands and Carlo forced Ralldel at second. No runs. FOURTH. WARRENS: Ralldel whiffed Pauley. Gregg reached first on Miller's error but was caught off the base. Reece went out, Ralldel to Loomis. JANESVILLE: Olson pounded the air. Porter tried to stretch a safe hit into right field into a two-bagger and was caught at second. Hall landed safe on first on Reece's fumble of Pauley's throw. Miller flew out to center field. No runs. FIFTH. WARRENS: Harkness out, Miller to Loomis. Erickson drew three strikes but reached first when Hall dropped the third and threw high to first. Motaw hit through short. Pauley flew out to Miller but Sullivan's hit filled the bases. Olson lost a chance to score up the game when he lined one down to Hall, forcing Motaw at second. No runs. JANESVILLE: Hall hit safe to short. Loomis bunted a hit to first but Pauley pulled himself out of a bad hole by striking out Ralldel. Mereness and Carlo in quick succession. No runs. SIXTH. WARRENS: Pauley struck valiantly at three. Gregg, despite some rather erratic chaff from the bleachers, hit safe to right field and later annexed second. Reece fanned and Harkness fouled out to Loomis, retiring the side. No runs. JANESVILLE: Olson out, Porter to Loomis. Erickson booted Porter's boulder allowing the savior of the game to reach first where he stayed while Hall flew out to Gregg and Miller met a similar fate. Pauley to Reece. No runs. SEVENTH. WARRENS: Erickson reached first safely when Loomis dropped his easy pop fly. Motaw bunted to Miller but the chance for a double play went shimmering when Loomis fooled Porter's throw. Pauley struck out. Sullivan lifted a high one to Mereness who made a dandy throw home and cut Erickson off at the home plate. No runs.

JANESVILLE: Hall flew out to left field. Loomis bunted out to first. Ralldel hammered a hot one down first base line but his hit was wasted when Mereness slammed one into Sullivan's mitt. No runs. EIGHTH. WARRENS: Olson hit safe to left field. Pauley bunted one to Olson. Gregg hit to second, forcing Olson and later stole second but was caught trying to repeat the performance. He caught a balk but his umpire could not see it. No runs. JANESVILLE: Carlo hit through short. Olson bunted down the third base line and was safe at first. Porter forced Carlo at third. Hall then had three strikes called but Motaw dropped the third and Hall ran although out. Motaw then threw to third, doubling Olson and Porter at second and third. It was queer baseball for neither man was tagged out but the mistake was discovered too late to make a protest. No runs. NINTH. WARRENS: Reece poked a high fly to Porter. Harkness duplicated to Mereness and Erickson fanned. No runs. JANESVILLE: Pauley whiffed Miller. Hall hit safe to right field. Loomis struck out and Ralldel slid to Erickson. No runs. TENTH. WARRENS: Motaw reached first on an infield hit through short and went to second on Pauley's out to Loomis. Sullivan fanned and Olson went out. Miller to Loomis. No runs. JANESVILLE: Motaw reached first on an infield hit through short and went to second on Pauley's out to Loomis. Sullivan fanned and Olson went out. Miller to Loomis. No runs. Janesville: Mereness put a Texas Leaguer into short right field. Carlo sacrificed. Olson fanned and Mereness reached third safely. With two down, Porter smoked a hard drive through Sullivan, scoring Mereness. One run.

Struck out by Ralldel, 9; by Pauley, 8. Base on balls, Hall. Sacrifice hit, Carlo. Passed ball, Hall. Hit by pitched ball, Sullivan. Double play, Hall to Loomis, Motaw to Olson to Sullivan. Time of game, 2:10. Umpire Miller.

NOTES OF THE GAME. Ralldel batted from home, wherever that is. The grounds were dusty, humpy and in bad shape generally. There wasn't a two bagger, or better, made during the entire ten innings. Miller made a fine running pick-up of Olson's hot drive in the tenth but was going too fast to get his throw to Loomis in the right place. Pauley, who by the way, is playing under an assumed name, had all of Ward's aggression and led for the bases. No one ventured more than six feet away from the sacks. Pauley pitched himself out of a bad hole in the fifth. With Hall on second, Loomis on first and none down, he put on steam and fanned Ralldel. Mereness and Carlo in one, two three order. Sullivan, who would not look out of place peddling bananas, had some flaming red shirt sleeves that excited casual comment. They were about as brilliant as Pauley's yellow striped jersey. Both pitchers were south paws but their styles were totally different. Ralldel was far more deliberate than his opponent who resembled an animated yellow and black pin wheel when he wound up to deliver the ball. Hall managed to get on the bases three times out of the four he was at bat. Twice he hit safe and on the third occasion, he investigated Pauley into presenting him with a pass, the only one of the game. Gregg easily hit it on any of the players in one respect, height. It extends about two yards and a half into the atmosphere and could easily be seen over the tops of the weeds in the outfield. He is mostly legs though. Had Janesville displayed such dilatory tactics as the Warrens, the game would undoubtedly have been called on account of darkness. Pauley seemed to have all the time in the world while his team mates appeared to be in a trance when their turn with the wicket came. There was some dispute regarding the propriety of giving Porter a hit in the tenth. Some seemed to think Sullivan should have been credited with an error but the general impression was that it was too hard to handle, especially when the rough hole was taken into consideration. The ball went some, too, after leaving the second sack's but.

CEREMONIES WERE VERY IMPRESSIVE

NEW SALVATION ARMY CITADEL THROWN OPEN TO PUBLIC SUNDAY. SERVICES OF DEDICATION

Were Held in the Auditorium of the Building, Prominent People of Janesville Participating in Exercises. "In the glory of Almighty God, and in honor of the founder of the Salvation Army, General William Booth, I now unlock this door and throw open this building for public worship and deeds of Christian charity." Thus was the new citadel of the Salvation Army on North Main street publicly opened by Mayor W. F. Carlo at the dedication services at the building yesterday afternoon.

NEW SALVATION ARMY HEADQUARTERS DEDICATED YESTERDAY. Following an open air meeting in the park, the flag raising took place at half past two, a large crowd assembling in front of the building for the speaking and other exercises. A large platform wagon, decorated with flags served as the speakers' stand and on this were seated Chairman of the Day H. C. Buell, Mayor W. F. Carlo, Col. Stephen Marshall, Major Percy Morton, and Major Clarence Boyd of Minneapolis, Rev. L. A. McIntyre, Captain Fleming and J. T. Wright.

The combined bands of Deloit and Janesville, twenty musicians, and a number of the soldiery, marched down from the park, Major Boyd leading, on their way to the new auditorium. The program was opened with a song, "Jesus, Lover of My Soul," Major Morton leading. Major Clarence Boyd offered a prayer and Major Morton presented the chairman, Supt. of Schools H. C. Buell. Chairman Buell made a few introductory remarks speaking of the work the Army is doing for the betterment of citizenship and especially Christian citizenship. In holding up an ideal of worship; preventive work in saving those who have not yet fallen and in rescue work. Rev. L. A. McIntyre spoke in brief on his recollections of early salvation work, their persecution and the work now being done by the Army.

Col. Stephen Marshall talked of the Army, saying that not only were they now receiving the appreciation of the people, but were admired and liberal supported as well. He spoke of the Army for good citizenship and said that there were no better citizens or truer patriots than those who wear the Salvation Army emblem. He called attention to their flag and explained the significance of the colors and the star which it bears. The flag of the United States and underneath it the emblem of the Salvation Army were unfurled by Captain and Mrs. Fleming, floating from the pole on top of the building. The audience united in singing a song as the flags were raised.

Opening of the Hall. The key was turned in the lock by Mayor Carlo, the door thrown open, the speakers of the day filed in, and then the crowd streamed into the building through the opened doors. The auditorium, which has a seating capacity of two hundred, was filled, extra chairs were put in, and even then many had to stand up in the rear of the hall. Dedication Services. Chairman Buell, Mayor Carlo, Rev. L. A. McIntyre and McIntyre, Mrs. Janet B. Day, officers of the Salvation Army, the band and the Y. M. C. A. quartette occupied the platform. The exercises commenced with singing, followed by a song by the Y. M. C. A. quartette. Chairman Buell extolled the faithful services of Captain and Mrs. Fleming in ministering to the needs of the community and for the splendid consummation of their efforts to secure a beautiful and commodious new building, saying that it was not so much the structure that was appreciated, but the spirit that was shown back of it. "The Salvation Army and Janesville" was discussed by Mayor Carlo who spoke of the Army as the Grand Army of Christians, and congratulated the officers and other members of the Army on their permanent home. He told of the good accomplished by them. Among the most striking statements he made was: "I have sometimes thought that the Salvation Army would be the future church of the church of the people. I question if any church accomplishes as much as the Salvation Army for the masses. I see no reason that with their increased facilities, they should not be a great power for good in the community. May God grant them that power."

Speaking in a whimsical but sincere manner, J. T. Wright spoke of the Salvation Army and the People. "In a way that appealed immensely to the people, Tributes to the work of the 'blue-bonnet brigade' were paid by Mrs. Janet B. Day, whose topic was "The Salvation Army and Woman's Work." Rev. J. W. Laughlin told of the similarity of the work of the church and the Salvation Army in turning men's faces in the right direction to a better way of living, and Rev. L. A. McIntyre, speaking from the viewpoint of the business man, said that the business world realizes the value of the Army in bettering civic conditions and saving men to the business world.

Captain Fleming was called on to speak and in a few words expressed his thanks to the public. Majors Boyd and Morton sang a duet, Major Morton furnishing an accompaniment with an accordion. The dedicatory address was made by Colonel Marshall. After describing the trials of the first Army workers in the city and their troubles in attempting to secure a foothold here, he told of the success of Captain and Mrs. Fleming in accomplishing an almost impossible task and their future efforts in securing the building. He made an appeal to the people for aid in paying for the building and subscriptions and a cash collection amounting to over one hundred dollars was secured.

Mrs. Fleming was asked to talk, expressing her appreciation of the kindness of the people of Janesville. Major Morton offered the dedicatory prayer and Colonel Marshall pronounced the building dedicated to the work of the Salvation Army, to the work of Christianity, and to the propagation of the principles of righteousness. The meeting closed with the singing of a hymn and the benediction by Colonel Marshall.

Public Meetings. A rounding salvation meeting was held in the hall at eight o'clock last evening by Colonel Marshall, assisted by Majors Morton and Boyd, and this evening there will be a united demonstration, officers and soldiers from nearby towns being present to take part. Financial Status. Captain Fleming, the other officers and the members of the Army have before them a stupendous task to secure the money for the next payment on the property where the new citadel is located. On the fourteenth of September, according to the arrangement made, the Army must pay to the former owners, one thousand dollars. Of this amount a little over one hundred dollars was secured yesterday. The sale of post cards on Saturday netted them about forty dollars and with the collections, fifty dollars was taken in, making a total of slightly over one hundred and fifty dollars for the two days. The Army, however, was unable to have as many workers on the streets Saturday as they had expected, and as all the cards were not disposed of, Captain Fleming is planning for another "Post Card Day" some time in the near future.

LOCAL HORSES WERE MATCHED YESTERDAY

Made Good Time in Impromptu Events Sunday Morning at the Fair Grounds. Several smart brushes in which local and Deloit horses participated, delighted the hearts of a few enthusiastic horsemen at the fair grounds yesterday morning. The first race was won by E. Ray Lloyd's "Ray Rex," with a gelding owned by Corcoran of Deloit and Noah Jones' mare close up. The first heat was stopped in 2:12, the second in 2:40 and the third in 2:28. The last half of the last heat was in 1:12 and the final quarter in 2:35 in spite of the deep dust. In the second race, with J. C. Nichols' "Carter Lily" and horses owned by Freeborn, Poole of Deloit, and D. H. Griffin entered, Poole won, although Freeborn's pacer had the event clinched had he not broke when close to the wire. Owners were well satisfied by the showing made in the two events for excellent time was made in spite of the deep dust. Lloyd's colt, "Ray Rex," staked by "The Rex" displayed the form although trained less than a month.

WOMAN'S PAGE

The Evening Chit-Chat

By RUTH CAMERON

BUT I'm not going to marry him; I'm going to marry him. I heard a girl protest the other day when her mother objected to the man who was going to marry, on the ground that his family was not a desirable one.

"If I marry John we shall live where his work is—a hundred miles from here. So what difference could his family possibly make?"

"I've heard that argument, 'I'm not marrying his family, I'm marrying him,' a good many times before and it seems to me there is just one answer to it.

You ARE marrying his family—in him.

There are some people who believe heredity has the most powerful influence on what we become, and as many others consider that environment does.

Remember that the influence of the family is made up both of heredity and environment.

Now please don't think that I mean a girl should refuse to marry a man because some member of his family had gone wrong, or because there was some family skeleton, or anything like that.

That isn't what I'm trying to say at all.

What I mean is that I believe a girl ought to think a good while before she decided to marry a man whose family atmosphere was not congenial to her, because, although she might take him very far away from it, she would still be marrying in him the product of that atmosphere.

In every family that is a family unit at all, there is apt to be a certain fixed standard, a certain unchanging set of ideals and desires and aspirations.

For instance, in one family the point of view is a habit of considering money and show the measure of life.

At their dinner table the talk runs something like this: "What do you think—the Browns have bought a new car that must have cost at least $1,000."

"The Joneses are blossoming out lately. Mrs. Jones went by here today in the handsome white suit with a whole lot of Irish lace on it."

"Just think, Harry Smith says they stopped at ———, and that's the most expensive hotel in Atlantic City."

"Mother, the new girl in school has a real gold watch. Can't I have one for Christmas?"

Isn't it very nearly inevitable that the son of this family will have the family point of view that the head and end-all of existence is to have money, or at least to appear to have it?

And suppose he marries a girl who has been brought up in a family where the point of view is a love of books and education and simple things— isn't it likely that their ideals and desires and aspirations, products as they are of such widely different points of view, are going to clash?

Perhaps they will incommensurate and produce a generation with a more cosmopolitan point of view than either, you suggest.

Perhaps.

But I don't say you should not marry a man whatever his family was. I simply wanted to show you that no matter how far from them your lines might lie, you were nevertheless marrying his family—in him.

If you are willing to do that, that's your affair.

Only just don't make the mistake of thinking you aren't doing it.

FOR YOU.

By MARY RUSSELL.

Did you ever notice the little birds hopping about on a hot day with their bills open, on account of thirst, and did you place a dish for them to drink from, or turn the tap to make a pool for their refreshment? You had not the time?

Perhaps that was meant for you—your work, placed in your hands—and you refused it!

Did you pass a crying child on the street the other day and not turn back to ask the cause of the tears? You had to get to the store before the doors closed to finish your shopping? Perhaps that was a bit of God's work that you passed by with the hope that the chance Samaritan would find it and do the work you shirked.

Did you notice a pale and weary woman with a crying child in the waiting room of the depot, where you were waiting for a train to leave you away to the peace and quiet of some summer resort? And did you stop long enough to find the cause of all this crying and trouble? Perhaps you could have lent a hand at a critical moment in some woman's life. Perhaps you might have saved the life of a suffering child being sacrificed to ignorance of simple rules of hygiene.

You were sorry, but you had to get a magazine and hurry into the comfort of the motor car, where there is no poverty and suffering to make one uncomfortable. Your work—and you shirked it!

Did you notice a thirsty dog trying to get a little water out of the hydrant and did you fall to turn on the water for him? Perhaps he was so thirsty that he lost his senses and, while temporarily insane from the heat and thirst, was shot as a mad dog. Many a good dog goes to this death because he is thirsty, and those who might have helped him refuse to take the trouble. This was your work—did you give—and you neglected it!

When your child comes home from school with a heart that is sore from some sense of injury, do you take the trouble to listen carefully and interestingly to the tale of woe and sympathy and wise counsel which is not even first cousin to the usual nagging children have grown accustomed to meet? If you did not you may have passed a turn in the road your child is building which will throw his whole life out of line. It is the duty which lies at one's hands that needs to be attended to. Giving impersonally to charity seems to be an inevitable part of our social system, but the charity of a village circle, where each gives of him or herself to help the cause along, is worth all the charity organizations in the world. One reaches the heart and makes the body comfortable at the same time, while the other makes the receiver ashamed and unhappy while providing creature comforts.

Send the next week with eyes open to the world about you. Do the small duties that lie at your hands. It may be that they are greater and of more importance in the world than to write a great book or paint a wonderful picture or play a graceful symphony.

Lives that are of greatest value are those that are occupied with the little things. The world needs its geniuses. We could not do without them. But neither could the genius prosper without the honest, plain, everyday people who do the duty which lies at hand simply and as a matter of course. The only question one needs to ask is: Is this for me? Does God mean for me to take up this burden? And when answered, to take the burden bravely.

KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS

PLAN TO GO TO ROME

Many Delegates Will Visit Eternal City at End of Annual Convention.

Quebec, Que., Aug. 1.—The annual convention of the Knights of Columbus opened here today and at its close on August 4 a large number of the delegates will begin a pilgrimage to Rome and Genoa.

The pilgrimage will be made under the auspices of the original incorporators of the organization, Daniel Colwell, Dr. M. C. O'Connor and William M. Geary, as well as Rev. P. J. McGivney, brother of the founder of the order, and will be representative of the great body of Catholic Italy from the Atlantic to the Pacific ocean. At the head of the party will be Prof. James C. Monaghan, a prominent lecturer, while Mrs. B. Ellen Burke, a writer on educational topics, will be one of the lecturers during the journey. Rev. R. J. J. Kenna, bishop of Cheyenne, Wyo., will be the spiritual director.

According to the present arrangements, the pilgrims will sail from Boston August 6 on the White Star liner Domestic, which has been chartered for their accommodation.

They are due to arrive in Genoa, the birthplace of Christopher Columbus, on August 20, where a fitting celebration will be held in honor of the discoverer of America. Three days later the pilgrims are scheduled to arrive in the Eternal City, where they will be given a private audience by the pope. A formal message will be presented to his holiness, telling of the growth and progress of the order and the work it has already accomplished. The last stop on the journey will be made at Oberammergau, where the pilgrims will witness a performance of the Passion Play. They are to arrive in New York on September 24.

The convention is attended by thousands of delegates from the various jurisdictions where the order is established, including all of the United States, Mexico, Cuba, Panama, England, all the provinces of Canada and Newfoundland.

Two-Time Presidential Candidate Issues Call for Armed Protectors.

Thomson, Ga., Aug. 1.—Thomas Watson, twice Populist candidate for president, imagines his life is threatened by Congressman Hardwick, and calls on his friends to protect him. Watson has been bitterly denouncing Hardwick, who is a candidate for reelection, and Hardwick has been replying in kind. Watson published the following: "The abuse of me by Hardwick in Thomson has gone far enough and must stop. Let every friend of mine who can do so be at Thomson on the 6th of August, prepared to stand by me to the death." Hardwick's friends say he will keep his appointment at Thomson despite Watson's call for armed men. It is feared bloodshed may result.

Douglas Robinson and his son said that they had only begun their fight against the Herkimer county "machine."

FATAL RACE RIOTS NEAR PALESTINE

TEXAS NEGROES HAVE THREE-DAY BATTLE WITH TROOPS AND POSSES.

18 BLACKS, 3 WHITES SLAIN

Shooting of Colored Man Who Had Threatened Farmer's Family Brought Climax to Racial Feeling in Vicinity of Palestine.

Palestine, Tex., Aug. 1.—Eighteen negroes and three white men are dead as the result of a pitched battle between 300 blacks from this section and three companies of state militia from Houston and Galveston and a detachment of state rangers.

Sloting Lasts Three Days.

Beginning Friday afternoon the race riot between the negroes and whites waged continuously until last night. Saturday night the soldiers and rangers augmented by posesses of citizens and farmers from Palestine, Jacksonville and other smaller places in this section surrounded the negroes in a dense copse of wood about seven miles from Palestine. Throughout the night the negroes and posesses exchanged shots and at dawn the soldiers prepared to rush the negro stronghold. The posesses, soldiers and rangers were divided into four detachments and deployed so as to completely surround the woods where the blacks were entrenched.

Negroes Are Entrenched.

Cautiously the soldiers and citizens felt their way through the woods and had advanced almost a mile before a shot was fired. Suddenly coming upon a group of entrenched negroes the soldiers were fired on and three hit. This was a signal for a general assault. On four sides the shots rang out. The negroes fired desperately, knowing the quarter would be denied any caught. Two hours of fighting from behind trees, stumps and any available breastworks was hot work under the broiling Texas sun and the soldiers and posesses withdrew to await the cooler hours of the day. At four o'clock in the afternoon the attack was renewed with the same formation and until sundown the firing was practically incessant. Gradually the troops closed in on the blacks, who, seeing that death or capture was inevitable, began to seek safety in flight, each man looking out for himself. The result was the majority of those killed by the posesses and troops were shot as they were endeavoring to break through the cordon thrown about the woods.

Blacks Surrender.

The sight of the falling negroes proved too much for the others hidden in various parts of the woods and they threw their guns away and advanced to the soldiers and members of the posesses with their hands extended above their heads, signifying they were unarmed. A pen in the shape of a hollow square was formed and the negroes were driven into the square as quickly as caught. The surrender of the blacks ended the battling. The captured negroes were brought in to this town and a camp formed for them on the outskirts of the village. Guards are patrolling the village and it is assured that none will escape. The feeling here is very high and for a time it was feared that attempts would be made to lynch negroes that were brought to this place. However, the presence of the soldiers and sheriff's deputies is believed sufficient guarantee that the bloody events are at an end.

Little Falls, N. Y., Aug. 1.—At the formal ending of the congressional boom of Theodore Douglas Robinson, nephew of former President Roosevelt, there was so much turmoil and confusion that the Republican convention adjourned without hearing the report of the resolutions committee.

Congressman Charles S. Millington was permitted to name the delegates to the Twenty-seventh district congressional convention, which finally spelled the defeat of young Robinson.

Douglas Robinson and his son said that they had only begun their fight against the Herkimer county "machine."

FACTIONAL DIFFERENCES.

For many years the republican party of the state has been rent by factional strife. The division of the forces have thus far benefited the common enemy, democracy, but little, but it has left a bad taste in the mouths of all true and loyal followers of the G. O. P. This last spring and summer the talk of reorganizing the republicans of Wisconsin on a basis of "loyalty to Taft" was brought to an issue by the convention of Taft republicans in Milwaukee. Factional lines were thrown to the winds and men who had been on both sides of the bitter inter-party warfare united to rejuvenate the republican party of the state. No nominations were made and the word harmony prevailed in all the deliberations. It was not a nominating convention but one of reorganization. In some localities former leaders of the conservative or stalwart faction have taken this to mean that it is to be a resumption of the old warfare and have planned to overthrow the real results desired to be obtained by the gathering—HARMONY. During the long factional contest the Gazette stood by the conservative element of the republican party. It does not regret its position at this time of trouble for the party and has no apologies to offer. With the coming of the primary into operation the factional differences existed only in the minds of a few bitter fighters. The Gazette stands for harmony in the republican ranks. It does not care to be classed as a partisan and will express its decided disapproval of any attempt of the leaders of the old line stalwart faction to resurrect the fight on those lines. In state politics it has supported the candidacy of Senator E. T. Fairchild for governor, Hudson for lieutenant governor, Hancock for attorney general and Cleary for insurance commissioner. In the Rock county assembly politics it has placed its faith in T. J. Whitton in the first assembly district, Grant U. Fisher in the second, and Gault in the third. These men are believed to be the best candidates possible for the office they seek. They represent no faction but are true and loyal republicans and worthy of the support of all who profess to be members of that party which now controls the destinies of the nation. On national politics the Gazette stands for President Taft and his policies, and urges the voters to support candidates who will give him the backing he should be assured of from republicans in congress. In state matters it is to be trusted that the old factional differences will be forgotten and that Rock county, as a loyal republican stronghold, will give its support to good men regardless of past political affiliations. Factional warfare should cease and never be revived.

GERMANY'S ATTITUDE.

The courteous refusal of the German government to interfere at the request of Senator Madriz in the affairs of Nicaragua simply shows that the great Teutonic power has too much good sense and too just an appreciation of the state of affairs and the position of the United States government to take a step that might cause a good deal of misunderstanding between two friendly nations. This country has been happy in that it has been able to pursue its destiny quite free from the intervention or diplomatic meddling of other powers. This was shown to be the case when Napoleon III. at the time of the Mexican fiasco tried to get the powers to retard the progress of the United States; it was shown again in the war with Spain, when certain continental powers found it impossible to make a concerted movement of advice or interference against this country and were forced to satisfy themselves in the columns of the foreign comic press. But it will be observed that in these cases the idea of intervention came from powers of a weight that made their object and ambition clear enough. In the case today, the idea is broached by a small and hardly recognized power, that can only gain its own object by enabling a great power in turn to gain what it may desire. Its proposal has met with the answer that it deserved and that was to be expected. In Nicaragua as in Liberia Germany has seen that the plans of the United States are no more than any country so situated would make, and that toward Nicaragua the action of our government no more than represents a desire that order may be restored and a source of irritation removed. The continued recognition of this fact by Germany shows that great powers today are not likely to be dragged into misunderstandings and that they all of them, whether they like it or not, feel the duty of peace and good-will. Since the days of Frederick the Great, the posture of Germany toward the United States has been one of friendship, and on that fact we may congratulate ourselves. There are duties cast on great powers that are sometimes excused to smaller, and these are clamped with responsibility. Perhaps the most prominent of these duties is the preservation of the world's peace; the peace that lets the husbandman sleep sound of nights; that gives the merchant and the artisan the time to drop up the state with industry undisturbed; that sees the mother and children about the quiet fireside and hears about their innocent happiness. The German has always loved these things, and now with the American seeks to preserve them.

AIRSHIP VERSUS AUTO.

Readers of newspapers must be impressed in these days by references to the airship, which recall with much vividness the storm of criticism that assailed the auto in its early days and through its early struggles. In those times, when the auto has found a place, and a permanent one, in our commercial and social economy, it is sometimes difficult to realize how skeptical were most of us with regard to it at the beginning, and how unreasonably and stubbornly many of us resisted its progress. Questions were raised as to its utility and as to its safety. Even if conceded to be useful and safe as a conveyance for some, much doubt was raised as to its desirability from the public standpoint. People rather rejoiced, and felt that their predictions were verified, when it seemed to meet with a setback. All of the "cold-you-see" that had been out of commission since the railroad became a demonstrated success were brought into play against the auto. And yet they did not suffice to stay its onward course a single moment. The airship is now passing through its early stages and early trials, and it is encountering much the same skepticism and pessimism that a few years ago fell to the lot of the auto, and a few years earlier fell to the lot of the steam locomotive. It is amazing, in view of the lessons they have been taught to the contrary, that people of high average intelligence will persist in entertaining doubts with regard to their ability to overcome all obstacles and difficulties that may arise in the way of legitimate achievement. They should know by this time that resistance to human progress, no matter what form it may take, must prove utterly futile. Janesville factories are growing beyond their present confines. This summer sees several large additions being made and were it not for the labor troubles earlier in the season the year would have been marked by unusual building activity along many other lines. July has gone to other realms with a smile on its face thinking of the burned and gasping bits of humanity that it has left behind as a mark of affection for the human race. August is here and all are anxiously waiting to see what she will offer. The coming sale of the Janesville street car line as arranged by its local representative will hasten the work of rehabilitation of the system and should be daily appreciated by the citizens generally. The long arm of justice reached across the Atlantic and took in custody the alleged wife murderer and his consort even before they landed in America. Spain again takes the front page with tales of a possible civil conflict and revival of the old Carlist peril. To orphan human republics the great Fatherland refuses to become a foster parent.

Heart to Heart Talks.

By EDWIN A. NYE.

IN HALF AN HOUR.

Half an hour can—Toss a pleasant joke to half a score of persons and lighten their daily tasks. Help some youngster do his difficult sum or lift him over some barrier in the way. Hold a friendly talk with a discouraged neighbor and, though you mention not his trouble, help him bear it. Write a postal card to some lonely one and send it on its message of fraternal greeting. Speak the little word in season to wife or husband that will shorten the weary day and bring the often smile. Get in touch with the optimism of nature and multiply your joys, divide your sorrows and give yourself an impetus for the duties of the morrow. Read a page or two from Tolstoy, or from Tennyson, or from Trollope, or from the other masters, so that you may think their thoughts and feel the beat of their emotions after them. Relax your tired nerves and strong bent energies and while resting link yourself with the infinite forces that make for strength and righteousness. All this you can do, or any part of it, in one short half hour. Or you can—Move among your fellows with no "glorious morning face" or word of cheer. Speak the words that smart and sting the heart of your friend like the cruel stroke of a whiplash. Write a message of meanness to one who should be dear to you and fill his day with sadness. Withhold the smile that you owe to your own and cloud the skies that you should strive to clear. Slight the sunlight and the breeze and the birds and the flowers and live like a stranger in your own good world. Live without rest or relaxation from incessant labors and strain to the snapping point the delicate threads of life. Read that which is only for the moment and fill your mind with mental trash or that which is vicious and fill your heart with moral filth. Push some fellow mortal whose feet have missed the way further down the road that leads to ruin. The half hour is yours. What will you do?

Uncle Walt THE POET PHILOSOPHER

By WALT MASON. (Copyright, 1909, by George Matthew Adams.)

A mountain of books have been written, to show us the paths we should tread, and we have been laden with precepts, by the RULE sages both living and dead; and most of the wisdom is useless, for all that a man needs to do, is just to be gentle and true. The names of the teachers is legion who'd point out the road to success; they'd have us believe that the journey, unguided, is full of distress; the secret, however, is simple, and easy to carry in mind: It's just to be honest and kind, but, just to be honest and kind, I don't care a cent for the theories and creeds that the wise men expound; for all of the words that are thundered are merely a wind and a sound; the logic life is so simple, it leaves all the dequies behind; it's just to be honest and kind, but, just to be honest and kind.

The piano philanthropist is a rare avis. Beware of the gushingly sympathetic salesman who is so very solicitous for your welfare, and who relates to you in a confidential and apologetic manner the awful things he knows about his competitor across the way. The man who vilifies his competitor lacks confidence in his own wares and thus "bents about the bush" to gain your confidence and you may realize when it is too late that he really meant to "do you" good. Tell the suave piano chap to confine his talk to business entirely and tell his other troubles to the police (they are just dying to hear it). If you are thinking about a piano, come in and let's talk it over.

Last Week of Southern Peaches

If you contemplate canning anything at all this season it would be wise to buy a supply of these fine Texas Elberta Peaches now.
The price is now 50c high, or, but even that is low when you consider the excellent quality of these peaches. There is nothing better for canning.

This week will see the last of these peaches distributed in Jamesville. We have distributed a great many cartons of them in this city and they have all given satisfaction to the utmost degree.

Even to the last they are good and you can still get choice selection from your grocer.

It is quite possible that there will be no peaches from Michigan on account of the severe weather conditions in the early spring, so we suggest that you can from the Texas crop while there is still time left.

In the second game the Y. M. C. A. got the better of the Caloric nine 11 to 8. Considerable excitement was shown at the games and the factory forces were very enthusiastic in the support of their own players.

Launch Owners.

A city ordinance requires all launches to show a light when on the river after dark. Disregarding this requirement makes the owner liable to a fine. Regardless of any ordinance, it is the duty of all people enjoying motor boating after dark, to make the sport as safe as possible and not endanger others. Please, therefore, make it a habit to always show a light on your launch when on the river after dark.

NARROWLY ESCAPED DROWNING IN RIVER

Launch Carrying Families of F. C. Burpee and F. S. Jackson Manoeuvred by Steamer Augustus.
Last evening between the hours of eight and nine, F. C. Burpee and family and Frank S. Jackson and family narrowly escaped drowning in the river just north of the railroad bridge when the launch in which they were returning to the city was almost rammed and later caught in the wake of the steamer Augustus, piloted by Norman Buchholz.

It is claimed that the steamer was running without lights and that Mr. Burpee and Mr. Jackson just skirted it in time to escape being sent to the bottom. After escaping the prow, the launch was caught in the wake of the heavy pleasure boat and nearly swamped. The members of the party were badly frightened and regard their escape as providential.

This afternoon Capt. Buchholz was arrested on a warrant charging negligence and will be taken before court tomorrow morning at ten o'clock.

LENGTHY STATEMENT FILED BY MAXFIELD

City Attorney Will Submit Long Communication to Common Council at Next Meeting.

Reconsidering his decision not to embody his charges against the mayor, chief of police and members of the fire and police commission in a communication to the common council, City Attorney H. L. Maxfield late Saturday afternoon filed with City Clerk Roy M. Cummings, a voluminous communication of ten typewritten pages in which he gives a detailed account of the late unpleasantness and also much space to the alleged immoral conditions unearthed by the Pennsylvania detective, Captain O. O. Ward. In the main, his communication is along the line of that which he decided not to submit to the common council at the last meeting fearing suits for libel. The present communication has been modified in some respects and Mr. Maxfield states that it will be presented at the next meeting of the council.

LEONARD LANNIGAN AGAIN IN TROUBLE

Former Jamesville Resident Under Arrest in Whitewater for Robbing Man of $150.

Leonard Lannigan, formerly of this city and with rather an unenviable police record, is in trouble again, this time at Whitewater. Saturday afternoon he is alleged to have stolen $150 from a Whitewater citizen's pocket and the police of this and neighboring cities were asked to look out for him. The Jamesville force searched the city all over Saturday evening but could find no trace of him. Early Sunday morning a message was received from Edgerton that Lannigan had been arrested there. Lannigan is well known to the police officials here, having been brought up on various complaints.

Two years ago he was convicted of stealing two turkeys from a Rock county farmer, and last year appropriated Wesley Allen's boat without permission. His last stunt was to allow himself to be locked in an Edgerton saloon for the night and then rifle the cash register. Lannigan is said to be rather a bad character and his actions were mainly the cause of his mother's mental breakdown as she is now in an asylum. It is probable that he will receive the full penalty this time as it is proved that he took the money. He escaped with a light penalty for his Edgerton escapade for a charge of petty larceny was all that could be brought against him.

DOCTOR CRIPPEN IS ARRESTED

ALLEGED WIFE SLAYER AND HIS STENOGRAPHER ARE IN CUSTODY.

TAKEN ON BOARD MONTROSE

Suspect Turns Deathly Pale While Female Companion Collapses When Arrested by Officers Disguised as Pilots—Taken to Quebec.

Montreal, Que., Aug. 1.—Charged with the murder of his wife, known in London as Belle Elmore, Dr. Hawley Crippen was arrested at Father Point by provincial officers on board the steamer Montrose. At the same time Miss Ethel Clare Levee, who accompanied him in his flight from Europe, was also taken into custody.

It was simple performance, this arrest, and carried out with all the absence of theatricals and a display of calmness that was remarkable under the circumstances. In a word, it was all that staid, stolid Scotland Yard could desire.

Dressed as a Boy.

Chief McCarthy of the Quebec provincial police, assisted by Chief Denis of the Dominion police, put Dr. Crippen under arrest on the deck of the Montrose at Father Point after he had been identified by Inspector Dow as the man waiting for a pilot. Two minutes after, Ethel Levee, the stenographer, with the suspect, whom Crippen had long been infatuated with, was put under arrest in her cabin, still wearing the clothes of a boy.

Inspector Dow stood face to face with the man he had led up to him in London and was certain that the man disguised as Rev. John Robinson was his quarry. Feeling that he had now vindicated himself and feeling the most real happiness in a year, Inspector Dow continued on his way to Quebec with his prisoners. There they will be arraigned before Judge Paret Angers, the purpose being to deport them to London. It is likely that Inspector Dow will board the Royal George for the return trip with his prisoners on Thursday.

Officers Disguised as Pilots.

Inspector Dow of Scotland Yard, with Chief McCarthy and ex-Chief Denis of the Canadian provincial police, all three disguised as pilots, went off to the steamer in a lifeboat rowed by four sailors. Crippen was smiling and premonishing the deck with Miss Levee and Dr. Stuart, the ship's doctor. He asked the doctor why so many pilots should come, to which Doctor Stuart replied they were probably returning to their homes, being out of turn.

The supposed pilots walked along until they passed where Crippen and his paramour were with Doctor Stuart. An Inspector Dow got a good look at Crippen and Miss Levee as they gave the preconcerted signal and the constables made the arrest and brought the couple down to their own stateroom, where they are now confined with Inspector Dow.

Turn Deathly Pale.

Only 15 minutes elapsed from the time the constables went aboard until the arrests were effected. Crippen turned the color of death and his voice, gurgled some unintelligible sound as he was hurried below. Miss Levee became hysterical and collapsed.

It took nearly half an hour for Doctor Stuart to restore her to her senses. She alternately wept, laughed and raved. Finally, after restoratives had been administered she fell asleep. When Dow returned to Crippen he found that fugitive calm and almost happy.

Thanks God for Ending.

"Good God," he said, "what an ending! And yet I am glad—that it is over. I have been through hell. No words can describe to you the horrors of this trip across the sea. We believed we were safe, and yet through every minute of the time since we left Antwerp we have been haunted by a phantom, invisible, but always near us. We could not sleep, and when we did sleep that nameless phantom crept into our dreams and colored them with horror. "When we first sighted land I wanted to scream for joy. Liberty seemed near. And yet like a cloud that speck of apprehension hovered over us. After our first sensation of delight it settled down and submerged us. When you came aboard something within me told me that the catatonic was at hand. I could feel it, though I didn't know why. Thank God, I say, that it is over. Another day of this would have killed me."

CHAPTER VI.—

CHAPTER VII.—

A Japanese at Large.

What was the girl doing out there in mid-lake in the company of her enemy? Orme had seen her enter the house of her friends in Evanston; had hidden her good-night with the understanding that she was to make no further move in the game before the coming morning. She must have left the house soon after he walked away.

Had she known all the time where the Japanese was? Had she hunted him out to make terms with him? If that were the case, her action indicated a new and unsuspected distrust of Orme himself. Her failure to call for help when Orme and Porter came up in their launch seemed to show that her presence in the other boat was voluntary. And yet Orme could not believe that there was not some simple explanation which she would welcome the first chance to make. He could not doubt her.

The immediate thing to do, however, was to find out just what she desired. Suppressing his excitement, he called out:

"Girl!"

At the same time he turned the lantern so that his own face was illuminated.

"Mr. Orme!" she cried, rising from her seat. "You here?"

"At your service."

He smiled, and turned his eyes for an instant on her companion. The face of the Japanese was a study. His eyes were narrowed to thin slits, and his mouth was formed into a meaningless grin.

Orme spoke to the Japanese in French. "Maku has confessed," he said. "He is under arrest."

The face of the Japanese did not change.

"Do you understand?" asked Orme, still in French.

There was no answer, and Orme turned to the girl and said, in French:

"I don't think he understands this language."

"Apparently not," she replied, in the same tongue.

"Tell me," he went on, "are you there of your own will?"

"No."

"Has he the papers?"

"I think so. I don't know."

"See if you can manage to get past him, and I will help you into our boat."

"I'll try," she nodded, with a brave effort to show reassurance.

Orme frowned at the Japanese.

"What are you doing with this young lady?" he demanded.

"No understanding."

"Yes, you do understand. You understood well enough when you robbed me this evening."

"No understanding," the Japanese repeated.

The girl, meantime, had moved slowly from her position. The two boats were close together. Suddenly, after a swift glance from Orme, the girl stepped to the gunwale and leaped across the gap. Orme reached forward and caught her, drawing her for a brief instant close into his arms before she found her footing in the cockpit.

"Splendid!" he whispered, and she tossed her head with a pretty smile of relief.

Porter had been standing close by, the boathook in his hands. "Is there anything more to be done?" he asked of Orme.

"Yes, wait a moment."

The Japanese had made no move to prevent the girl's escape. Indeed, while she was leaping to the other boat, he balanced himself and turned to his motor, as though to continue the work of repair.

"Now, then," called Orme, "you must give me those papers."

"No understanding," the Japanese did not even look up from his task.

Orme turned to Porter. "Give me the boathook," he said, and taking it, he hooked it to the gunwale of the other boat, drawing the two crafts together. His intention was to "load" the boathook to bring the Japanese to terms. But the Oriental was too quick. His apparent indifference vanished, and with a catlike pounce, he seized the boathook and snatched it from Orme's grasp.

The action was so unexpected that Orme was completely taken by surprise. He made ready, however, to leap in unarmed, but the Japanese thrust the blunt end of the boathook at him, and the blow, which struck him in the chest, sent him toppling backward. He was saved from tumbling into the cockpit by Porter, who caught him by the shoulders and helped him to right himself. The two boats tossed for a moment like corks in the water.

When Orme again leaped to the gunwale, the Japanese was using the boathook to push the craft apart. A final shove widened the distance to six or eight feet. The jump was impossible. Even if the boats had been nearer together it would have been folly to attempt an attack.

Stepping down into the cockpit, Orme bent upon a cushion. He seemed to be content that he should play the game for her.

"What is wrong with his motor?" he said. "Do you know?"

She answered in an undertone: "I shut off the gasoline supply. He wasn't looking. He didn't see."

"Good for you, girl!" he exclaimed. "How did you do it? At the tank?"

"No. Unfortunately the valve is at the carburetor. Oh," she continued, "we must get the papers!"

Orme turned to Porter. "Are you willing to take a risk?" he asked.

"Anything in reason." The life-saver grinned. "Of course, I don't understand what's going on, but I'll back you."

"This is a good, stout tub we are in," Orme hesitated. "I want you to ram her nose into that other boat."

Porter shook his head. "That's going pretty far," he said. "I don't know that there is warrant for it."

"It won't need to be a hard bump," Orme explained. "I don't want to hurt the fellow."

"Then why?"

"To frighten him into giving up some papers."

Porter looked straight into Orme's eyes. "Do the papers belong to you?" he demanded.

"No," Orme spoke quietly. "They belong to this young lady—or, rather, to her father. This Japanese, and the other one, there on the shore, stole them."

"What is the lady's name?"

"I can't tell you that."

"But the police?"

"It isn't a matter for the police. Please trust me, Mr. Porter."

The life-saver stood irresolute.

"If this boat is damaged, I'll make it good five times over," continued Orme.

"Oh, it wouldn't hurt the boat. A few scratches, perhaps. It's the other boat I'm thinking of."

"It's pretty grim business, I know," remarked Orme.

The younger man again studied Orme's face. "Can you give me your word that the circumstances would justify us in ramming that boat?"

It flashed over Orme that he had no idea what those circumstances were. He knew only what little the girl had told him. Yet she had assured him again and again that the papers were of the greatest importance. True, throughout the affair, thus far, with the exception of the blow he had given Maku, the persons concerned had offered no dangerous violence. The mysterious papers might contain information about South American mines—as little Portol had suggested; they might hold the secrets of an international syndicate. Whatever they were, it was really doubtful whether the necessity of their recovery would justify the possibility of slaying another man.

Perhaps the girl had unconsciously exaggerated their value. Women who took a hand in business often lost the sense of relative importance. And yet, who had been so sure; she had herself gone to such lengths. Then, too, the South American had hired a burglar to break into her father's house, and now this Japanese had abducted her. Yes, it was a serious game.

Orme answered Porter. "I give you my word," he said.

Porter nodded and tightened his lips.

"At the very least, that fellow has tried to abduct this young lady," added Orme.

"All right," said Porter. "Let her go."

The other boat had drifted about 50 feet away. Orme called out:

"Hello, there, Japanese. Will you give up the papers?"

No answer came.

"If you won't," cried Orme, "we are going to ram you."

"Oh, no!" exclaimed the girl suddenly. "We mustn't drown him."

"We shan't," said Orme. "But we will give him a scare." Then, in a louder voice: "Do you hear?"

The only reply was the tapping of metal on metal. The Japanese, it seemed, was still trying to find out what was wrong with his motor.

"Well, then," Orme said to Porter, "we'll have to try it. But use low speed, and be ready to veer off at the last minute."

"He'll try to fend with the boat hook," said Porter.

"If he does, I'll get him."

"How?"

"Lasso." Orme picked up a spare painter that was stored under the seat, and began to tie a slip-knot.

The girl now spoke. "I suppose we shall have to do it," she said. "But I wish there were a less dangerous, a less tragic way."

Hardly knowing what he did, Orme laid his hand gently on her shoulder. "It will be all right, dear," he whispered.

If the word embarrassed her, the darkness covered her confusion.

Porter had started the motor, setting it at a low speed, and now he was steering the boat in a circle to gain distance for the charge.

"I've lost the other boat," exclaimed Orme, peering into the darkness.

"She's off there," said Porter. "You can't see her, but I know the direction."

He swung the launch around and headed straight through the night.

"Hold on tight," Orme cautioned the girl, and coiled his lasso, he went to the bow.

The launch moved steadily forward. Orme, straining his eyes in the endeavor to distinguish the other boat, saw it at last. It lay a few points to starboard, and Porter altered the course of the launch accordingly.

"Make for the stern," called Orme, "and cripple her propeller, if you can."

Another slight change in the course showed that Porter understood. To be continued.

There Was Once a Man, Mark Twain Tells,

who wouldn't shingle his roof when the sun shone because it wasn't necessary, and when it rained he couldn't. So he never got anywhere.

There are some merchants who don't advertise when business is good because they don't need to and when things are slow they think they can't afford it, so they never get anywhere.

The time to advertise is when you have something to say about your business or your goods. Every business man can find things to say that will interest people in his store and in his goods if he has a good proposition. That it pays to advertise is a truism all live merchants know.

Some merchants know how to present their goods and their store and the policies of the store better than others, but MOST merchants use The Gazette because The Gazette goes into more than 5 times as many homes as any other advertising medium for but little more in cost than others.

SAMUEL UNTERMYER.
$20,000,000 COMPANY TO BUY
STANDARD OIL.
Samuel Untermyer, lawyer who is said to be forming the company.

New York, N. Y.—After years of supremacy in the oil trade of the world, the Standard is to have a large competitor. Twenty millions is the announced capital stock of the corporation, which is to be known as the Central Fuel Oil company. Considerable London capital is back of the enterprise. In fact, $15,000,000 will come from London and the remaining $5,000,000 from New York. In accordance with the charter the capital can be increased to any amount desired.

Natural History.
A certain father who is fond of putting his boys through natural history examinations is often surprised by their mental agility. Triumphant Ugly Women.

Never Saw Her.
Did you notice that woman we just passed?
The one with blonde puffs and a fur hat and a military cape, who was dreadfully made up and had awfully soiled gloves on?
Yes, that one.
No, I didn't notice her. Why?

Luck.

Nothing Serious.
"Great gun! I've swallowed my collar button!" exclaimed the first actor in the dressing room.
"Here, I'll lend you one of mine," answered the other, with exaggerated indifference.

The Country's Need.
"I say," said the old lady with the high-pitched voice, as the jerk-water slowed down at Grigsby station; "I say, what is all this fuss about education? boys to be civil engineers? The thing this 'ere country really needs is a few civil conductors, and less saucy brakemen."—Lippincott's Magazine.

Loss Their Heads.

The Ticklemouse
—and his Sleepyland Adventures
By Roy Rutherford Bailey with Davy and Dorfy

The Pillow Fight

COME, come, children! Davy and Dorfy stopped short, pillows upraised, at the stern voice from the stairway. "If I hear any more of that racket upstairs I'll know the reason why!"

"Yes, Daddy." The twins dropped the pillows and quieted down at once, but the fun was hard to stop. "Just you wait till the ticklemouse comes," said Dorfy in a whisper, "and I'll show you what's what!"

And a few hours later, when all the house was still, the two merry mice were listening to the plan of battle. "All right," said Willy Wishinmouse, ready for a frolic. "Let's choose sides, Uncle Tick. I choose Davy!"

"Dorfy suits me," smiled his uncle. "Wait till I shut this door and tickle it thicker, so we won't wake up the folks. There—now we're safe. Davy, push that vase back out of harm's way. Are you ready—fire!" And he slammed his pillow across at Willy so suddenly that the fat little Wishinmouse was taken unawares and sent spinning against the wall.

With a gasp came Dorfy's pillow at Davy's curly head. And—bing! came Davy's at her own. Instead of four pillows it seemed more like a flock of forty—the air was full of them. Fast and furious they flew, till the twins stopped for breath. But still the fight went on.

Once Willy Wishinmouse caught his at top speed, the twins laughed so loud the head that the Ticklemouse was floored completely, and Willy quickly jumped on top of him, burying his face under the downy pillow till he was almost smothered. And when the Ticklemouse got out from under the pillow and chased Willy around the nursery at top speed, the twins laughed so loud and long the Mouse stopped them for fear their parents might hear them after all.

Willy took advantage of the moment's halt in the fun by gathering up all four pillows and hurling them at his surprised uncle with such force that they burst open, filling the air with feathers. His mischief came down on his own head, though, for the night breeze from the open window swept the flying feathers into Willy's own face.

"Ha, ha! Oh—ugh—help!" The Wishinmouse was choking and spluttering on a mouthful of the tiny feathers. Davy and Dorfy pounded him on the back till he caught his breath, and turned to find the Ticklemouse looking in dismay at the feathery drifts on the nursery floor.

"Now the chilluns will be in trouble!" he said. "It'll take all night to get those feathers back into their pillows!"

The twins looked sober, but not so Willy Wishinmouse. He began to laugh, and then to whistle a lively little tune, standing on one foot, stork-fashion, and winking one saucy eye. And, behold! Like well trained little birds, the feathers danced around the room, faster and faster till each had hopped back into its own pillow again!

The Ticklemouse laughed to see how easily it was done. "Don't tell me fine feathers won't behave like fine birds," said he. "With Willy here to whistle things into line, the twins' mother would never in the world have use for a vacuum sweeper!"
